Fear the Race not the Racers,

The Blood Run 5K is coming together nicely. We have some great zombies willing to chase you for this weekend. This is the first year we are full of zombies for this race. The volunteers here have so much fun.

We are planning on getting all racers on the course in the first 60 minutes from the start. There will be a 15 to 45 second delay between start times to give each racer a good run without seeing a racer except on the way back. We feel if there are racers especially scared we may delay your start even more to give you even more of an alone feel to the race. (Just kidding or am I)

The weather for this race is set to be awesome. With a start temp of around 56 degrees with clear skies. If this is cool for you dress accordingly. Be aware that any clothes you wear most likely will be stained red by the end of the race so do not wear expensive jackets. What we recommend if you need a hoodie is to buy one from the thrift store and wear your Blood Run White shirt over it.

The starting line and finish will be in a heated arena for horses.

We tried to make it clear on the website that you will get blood on your shirt from the zombies chasing you. Zombies are instructed to touch only backs and shoulders leaving a cool design on your race shirt of bloody hands. If you want more blood put on you ask your friends or other racers. We ask that only authorized zombies use the blood unless expressly requested from a friend. We do not want this to turn into a blood bath at the end of the race. ;) We do not want it in eyes either.

The course will be fairly dark and it will be right about dusk. Some racers have asked to use headlamps. Though this will help you see and help you avoid hazards it is better for full effects to not use them if you dare. However if you must they are allowed. It will also make things scarier for other racers as things pop up. We will try to mark the pot holes with cones dipped in radioactive (glow stick slime) material to help you see the hazards as they glow.

Packet pickup will be available from 5-7PM on race day at the Scotsman Center. We start putting racers on the course right at 7:30PM so try to be prior to 6:30PM.

This is our last year for this race. We are sad to see it go because it is so fun but we are not getting enough racers to justify it continuing. Have fun this last year.

Good Luck this weekend! We hope you make it out alive. Actually no we don't!!!
